This letter is for the position of Product software engineer at Vercel. The opportunity to work for the company that made such an important framework as nextJs is a very exciting opportunity!

During my time at Radio-Canada, I built dozens of applications in Angular from scratch ranging from the complexity of a simple dashboard to small social media platforms for journalists to share media they took on the field for different articles and the news that night. I was trained in web accessibility by Olivier Fortin at Radio-Canada to make sure colorblind, deaf, and blind people are able to use our internal tools more easily. Because of those specific experiences, I believe I would be a great fit for the role.

With this in mind I thank you for your consideration for this position and I hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely, Louis Contant
